

Benjamin Kagan: Covid Vaccine Inspired A Teen To Volunteer His Skills

14-year old Benjamin Kagan's know-how is underscored in the news report link below. It gives an inside glimpse of his skillset beyond computers. While other articles feature teens who help seniors track down vaccine appointments with their computers, such as Vaccine Hunters, Kagan offers more. Database creation is not a skill many people can do well.

Through his Chicago Vaccine Angels database, Kagan tracks down where and when vaccines are available and makes appointments for people on a waiting list.

The report illustrates his entrepreneurial skillset. From offering tips through a similar organization to taking charge and helping those in need of his service.
