Free Self-Employment Resources for People with Disabilities

Update:

Here's an interesting international site (British and US) 2017 for home. And many other topics included.

Caroline Hampton of Open educators.org has provided seven links that include articles about personal finance, buying a car for a user with special needs, and getting into real estate and other industries. See the end of this post

Other topics noted previously health, personal finance, and travel Special thanks to educator labs.org for providing the information.

Disabilities occur in many ways. For instance, each year at more than a million people are injured on the job, according to government statistics and a significant number of people find themselves classified as disabled.

Accidents that occur during recreational or routine tasks or auto accidents account for additional statistics; for some, physical assault as a result of a crime is another factor.

A career change is the result for many who can no longer continue in their current occupation because of disabling injuries.

JAN is a nonprofit organisation at the University of West Virginia with a name that does not fully explain all the services offered.

Jan provides free information, consulting, and referral services regarding resources on the Americans with Disabilities Act and other pertinent laws.

In addition to workplace accommodations for people with disabilities, they provide information concerning self-employment and small-business development options. Some of the useful information to be found on the site includes an overview for potential entrepreneurs on how to start a nonprofit business.
