

Searching For The Next Great Food Idea

In the first video, CharisMagie, a social worker living in Toronto, Canada samples snack products sent by a friend from the Netherlands.

But the video below reviews snack subscription boxes from around the world and offers recommendations about choosing the best company.

Finding ideas for a new business while visiting another part of the world has long been a way food-based ventures are inspired. But restricted travel means searching for other ways to learn about the food and culture in unfamiliar places.

While both videos may offer helpful information, the first video even more so because of insights from a native.

