The author, an industry guru admits that his wife created an award-winning blog...

without using any of his tech tips. I was relieved and amused to come across this information because while some of SEO makes sense, overall, I find the concept confusing.

Unless there's a tap-dancing parrot wearing a red bandana involved in the copy, I just don't see the benefit, especially with the tremendous amount of online competition.

Some of my blog posts have landed on the prized first page of Google search results.
